Andrew Carroll has journeyed across America by car, train, plane, helicopter, bus, bike, kayak and on foot to find the unmarked historic sites where extraordinary events occurred: the train platform where the brother of Lincoln's assassin saved the life of Lincoln's son; the farm where a teenage boy's brainstorm led to the creation of television; the remote Hawaiian island where World War II really began. From inventions to deaths to body snatching—through conspiracies, scandals, tragedies and triumphs—Carroll demonstrates that what we know as "history" is only a small cross-section of the past.
